Dear Members,

Thank you. In no small part due to your support this year, we were able to begin laying the foundation for the next 90 years. We also had an incredibly busy year.

Drew joined us as our new Executive Director in September, replacing Donna Dunn after her three seminal years of leadership. Donna accomplished so much amidst a pandemic, helping to put our institution on firm financial footing while also improving the organization's governance practices. We miss Donna greatly but are lucky to count her among our supporters and rely on her expertise as an advisor in all that we do.

Looking back at the past year, we have been fortunate to benefit from the efforts of our talented staff and Board of Trustees. In the fall, our trustees exceeded their own matching gift goal for our Year-End Campaign, galvanizing supporters to surpass our stretch goal for this all-important source of operating funds. This past winter, we reinvigorated our Corporate Sponsorship Campaign to bring new resources and ideas to the Observatory. Stay tuned for exciting news on this front, including a new line of extreme weather gear being created with insights from our observers.

As an organization that relies on private donations for more than half of our budget, all of this financial support means that we are in a good position to tackle what lies ahead. Here are a few highlights of plans made in 2022 that are now bearing fruit.

On Scientific Research

Our scientific experts began planning in 2022 to make our facilities more accessible for undergraduate/graduate students and faculty researchers. This work includes:

- Better support for our summit internship program that enables us to recruit internationally while also forming a Diversity Internship Program with Howard University and Jackson State University.
- The establishment of research rates for our facilities, staff, and data that give our university partners clear guidance on how to include us in future research projects. This effort makes us the partner of choice for universities working in mountain meteorology, extreme weather, climate, forecasting, and the human relationship to climate and weather.
- Continued planning for Undergraduate Research Adventures that will provide universities in our region with educational opportunities for their students, including summit field trips and staff partners for real-world student research projects.

On Education

We began planning for school-based programs that will make the Observatory the leading resource for climate and weather education.

- Already this spring, we've launched six pilot field trips to Mount Washington's summit for middle school students in our region. Our aim is to make this internationally unique environment accessible to all children, with these trips offered at no cost for schools starting in fall 2023.
- Our plans call for a full menu of school day, afterschool, and virtual programs along with curricula resources and professional development for teachers.
- We are identifying opportunities for our educational staff to contribute to summertime programs at camps and with business partners at their stores.
- We are considering how to make Science in the Mountains a true lecture series, with in-person events and dynamic speakers.

On Recreation and Safety

Our summit crew takes hourly observations 24 hours per day, 365 days per year and produces our twice-daily Higher Summits Forecast broadcast all over the White Mountains region. Our planning in 2022 calls for augmenting this work.

- We have been building partnerships with the United States Forest Service (USFS), New Hampshire Department of Homeland Security, Appalachian Mountain Club (AMC), and other public and private partners to carry these forecasts further to help recreationists stay safe.
- We posted more than 150 yellow warning signs at trailheads leading to the higher summits in the White Mountain National Forest so hikers can receive our forecast via text message before they set foot on a trail.
- We're working to share our expertise in weather guide decision-making and accident prevention strategies with partners in local, state, and federal government.

In November, our staff and trustees met to update our Strategic Plan—begun under Donna's leadership—to reflect these new developments, with five strategic priorities now detailed: Science and Research, Education, Outreach, Finance, and Governance.

We wish we had enough space to tell you more about all we have planned, from making our weather station more accessible to the public in coming years to expanding our media partnerships that carry our forecasts to metro audiences such as Boston, Portland, Portsmouth, and Burlington—all places where visitors would benefit from knowing the weather before they visit us here in the mountains.

What we can tell you is that we've been working to strengthen key partnerships with organizations such as New Hampshire State Parks, the Mt. Washington Auto Road, the Mount Washington Cog Railway, USFS, and AMC. Without their close collaboration, all that we do would not be possible. We are extremely thankful for their support.

And we are extremely thankful to each of you reading these words. 2022 marked the beginning of a busy and fruitful time here at the Observatory. We have an incredibly talented team and big plans underway. We look forward to each of you being part of these plans. And we hope you will reach out to us with your thoughts, advice, support, and help.

Yours,

Drew Bush
Executive Director

Bruce Soper
Incoming Chair, Board of Trustees

You're keeping us at the leading edge of extreme weather science and climate research

Weather observers Alexis George, Francis Tarasiewicz, and Karl Philippoff capture a historic moment at dusk after forecasting and observing a generational storm on Feb. 3 and 4. They endured extreme conditions on Mount Washington's summit as an Arctic air mass plunged temperatures to at or below  $-45^{\circ}\text{F}$  for 13 hours.

During the powerful Arctic front in early February, our observers measured a  $-47^{\circ}\text{F}$  air temperature at about 4:00 a.m., matching the Observatory's all-time record low previously set on Jan. 28, 1934.

Our staff continued a legacy of outreach during February's extreme weather event as regional, national, and international media called to report on our continuous measurements in the face of  $-109^{\circ}\text{F}$  wind chills.

We published a new technical overview of the Mount Washington Regional Mesonet in the American Meteorological Society's (AMS) 'Journal of Atmospheric and Oceanic Technology,' Volume 40: Issue 4.

Staff and interns presented posters at the AMS Annual Meeting and delivered a presentation on MWOBS' development of a custom pitot static tube anemometer for deployment on Mount Everest.

Our new contract with University of Delaware climatologists involves further refining our data science practices to continuously improve research efficiency.

Our research into near-surface lapse rates (in writing phase with an extended contract) and investigation of rain-on-snow trends are the third and fourth projects funded by Synoptic Data.

MWOBS is hard at work maintaining the Mount Washington Regional Mesonet, with plans to expand our network of 17 automated stations in and around the White Mountains that continuously collect weather data. We have applied for several funding opportunities to modernize and expand the mesonet infrastructure. The project focus is to enable accurate, real-time forecasting to help conservation, tourism, and recreation organizations in New Hampshire’s North Country plan, develop, and manage natural resource-based tourism while also facilitating their business and workforce development. Expanding our mesonet will enhance real-time data on the weather processes that impact people and landscapes.

YOUR IMPACT: DATA & FORECASTING IN THE NORTH COUNTRY

Backcountry skiers and hikers arrive at Hermit Lake Shelter on the Tuckerman Ravine Trail, where MWOBS has one of 17 automated weather stations continuously collecting and transmitting weather data for research, recreation, and real-time decision making.

“The Observatory probably has more experience than anybody around the world at measuring the weather in an extreme location.”

— Dr. Baker Perry,
National Geographic Explorer

Over the course of the year, we reported 8,760 hourly observations, published 1,460 specialized forecasts, and performed all data quality checks (2/day, 1/week, and 1/month).

We adopted a new Extreme Weather Events Plan to guide communication and bolster staff support during weather events that can disrupt operations and attract heightened media attention.

Director of Weather Operations
Jay Broccolo digs out an automated weather station along the Mt. Washington Auto Road in March.

Building partnerships that connect communities with the mountain and its value to science

MWOBS brought together several of our valued summit partners (and their families) for an overnight at our weather station in April. The Mount Washington Auto Road, Mount Washington Cog Railway, Mount Washington State Park, and Observatory were all preparing for a busy summit season ahead. Standing in front of the spring snow wall on the Auto Road are Ryan Presby (Cog Railway), Donabeth Murray, Camden Reichert and his friend Emily, Danielle Reichert, Tobey Reichert (Auto Road), Keith Garrett and Jon Powers (Observatory), Axel (cousin of the Observatory's Jay Broccolo), and Drew Bush (Observatory).

From May to October 2022, we provided 200+ weather station tours for over 750 members and visitors, including open houses during Seek the Peak and our 90th anniversary on Founders Day, Oct. 15.

Educational trips to the summit returned in winter 2022. Our team hosted six Overnight EduTrips for a total of 54 participants.

Our education staff presented more than 40 virtual programs to K-16 students and libraries, in addition to our monthly Science in the Mountains virtual program.

Eleven NH State Representatives visited the summit in August for a presentation and weather station tour, followed in September by tours with NH Gov. Chris Sununu and the Executive Council.

A regional climate communications working group that includes MWOBS, Hubbard Brook Research Foundation, and the AMC developed a new “Climate Change in the White Mountains” exhibit showing long-term data trends.

More than 40 volunteers joined our newly formed docent program, working as ambassadors in our summit museum. Our winter volunteer program also resumed after a pandemic pause, with new and long-term volunteers working week-long shifts at our weather station.

Seven media outlets visited the summit last fall/winter, producing their own video and print stories to feature MWOBS' work. This included national coverage by CBS Mornings.

Trustees and staff wrote a Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI) statement with guiding principles and action items, making DEI a strategic MWOBS priority. Formal adoption at the Annual Meeting is anticipated.

Winter 2022-23 saw the return of Arctic Wednesdays, our professional development program for teachers. MWOBS hosted six trips with 10 K-12 teachers from New Hampshire and Massachusetts, who joined summit staff for Wednesday shift change days throughout the winter months. When applying, teachers share plans for integrating the opportunity into their classroom, including the use of Observatory resources with their students. They connect live with their classrooms from the summit to build excitement around learning weather and climate topics.

YOUR IMPACT: INSPIRING TEACHERS AND STUDENTS

Laconia Middle School teachers Jessica Rominger and Wesley Bates pause for a moment at Cragway Turn on their way to the summit of Mount Washington for an Arctic Wednesday trip.

“Thank you again to the staff, as this is an experience that will last me a lifetime.”

— Karen Wesley, Teacher at the Center School (Stow, MA) & Arctic Wednesday participant

Director of Weather Operations Jay Broccolo speaks to a crowd during a press conference hosted by Gov. Chris Sununu on Feb. 1 in advance of the extreme cold.

Your support keeps the mission moving forward

Thanks to YOU, our work to inform and provide insight endures. You help us overcome extremes and push boundaries to ask the unanswered questions, at a place unlike any other, where the weather meets Mount Washington.

Our current donor retention rate is 68% (separate from our Seek the Peak fundraiser). In the U.S., the average rate for nonprofits is 43-46%.

Our 22nd annual Seek the Peak raised $173,944 thanks to 247 participants, event sponsors, Expo visitors, and raffle ticket purchases. This event connects our highly engaged hiking community of all ability levels with the White Mountains and our work supporting safe backcountry adventure.

During our 2022 Year-End Campaign in November and December, 1,524 donors gave a total of $251,275.

Our reinvigorated Corporate Sponsorship Program and renewed summit partner agreements have raised critical support for our summit operations, research, professional development for teachers, distance learning, and weather services.

Transformational Bequest to Fund New Weather and Climate School Programs Across New Hampshire

Eighth-grade students from Whitefield Elementary School learn about measuring precipitation on Mount Washington on May 31 with MWOBS Director of Education Brian Fitzgerald.

New Hampshire's school children will be the beneficiaries of a generous $4 million bequest from the Sheldon Family Estate to MWOBS. These funds will be used to offer school educators enhanced support in the teaching of weather and climate science that meets the Next Generation Science Standards.

"We're excited to offer schools across our region a full suite of programming options," Brian Fitzgerald, MWOBS Director of Education, said.

Monies from the bequest will be used to offer a new menu of options that include school day, after-school, virtual, and field trip programs that teach students the technical science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) skills found in weather and climate science. In the coming months, MWOBS will offer teachers further opportunities such as curricula, professional development, and lesson planning. Already, MWOBS has added two new staff to support this effort.

MWOBS began piloting educational field trips to the summit of Mount Washington in partnership with the Mount Washington Cog Railway Company this spring with middle school students from three Coos County schools: Whitefield Elementary School, Stratford Public School, and Groveton High School. These trips were made possible at no cost to each school thanks to a generous Empowering Coos Youth Program Grant from the New Hampshire Charitable Foundation's Neil and Louise Tillotson Fund. A student leadership council made up of students from each school provided MWOBS staff with guidance on topics and activities that are of highest interest to their peers.

"As stewards of Mount Washington State Park, we congratulate MWOBS on this impactful bequest and are excited to welcome more students to the summit of Mount Washington in partnership with the Observatory and the Cog Railway Company," Sarah Stewart, Commissioner of the Department of Natural and Cultural Resources, said. "This type of investment in education for regional students aligns perfectly with the Division of Parks and Recreation's mission to provide outstanding educational and inspirational experiences through the cooperative stewardship of the state's natural and cultural resources."

More than 76 organizations across the U.S. will benefit from shares of the Sheldon Family Estate, with a focus on small- and mid-sized environmentally focused nonprofits and a concentration in New England.

"We cannot thank the Sheldon family enough for helping us meet our goal of increasing access to Mount Washington for all students in New Hampshire," Drew Bush, MWOBS Executive Director, said. "Maintaining a weather station on New England's highest peak holds truly high costs, and more than 60 percent of our operating budget comes from private donors. We've operated on a shoestring for decades. And even despite this amazing gift, we still could not do what we do without our members' support."

Remaining monies from the bequest will be used to pay down a portion of the substantial debt held by MWOBS on its administrative office building in North Conway as well as be invested in the organization's endowment in anticipation of future expenses.

2ND ANNIVERSARY FOR NIMBUS

Our adorable and mischievous resident summit cat NIMBUS celebrated his Gotcha Day on April 14, 2023. He provides cozy companionship to our weather observers, continuing a long tradition of resident mousers who have lived at our mountaintop weather station since its inception back in 1932. We celebrated his second anniversary on the “meowtain” with a cake and a few extra treats for Nimbus after his supper.

LEGACY SOCIETY ADVANCES YOUR IMPACT

By naming Mount Washington Observatory in your estate plans, you continue the impact that your generous donations have made during your lifetime. In Fiscal Year 2023, a total of $567,454 was donated to the Observatory thanks to member bequests. Consider our Legacy Society as a way to ensure our work in weather and climate can withstand any conditions for the next 90 years. For details, please email giving@mountwashington.org.

MOUNT WASHINGTON OBSERVATORY

MISSION

Mount Washington Observatory is a private, nonprofit, member-supported institution with a mission to advance understanding of the natural systems that create Earth's weather and climate. It serves this mission by maintaining a weather station on the summit of Mount Washington, performing weather and climate research, conducting innovative science education programs, and interpreting the heritage of the Mount Washington region.

PURPOSE

We exist to gather, disseminate, and analyze daily weather data; to contribute to the critical, long-term weather and climate record essential to scientific understanding of weather and climate in a unique, extreme environment.
